One of the Free Trade advocates, who figures in the columns of the Tarsuza quite requestly, whichis a species fundament for the catechedinal or dialogue style of argument. He has tried easy other species of controvery, moduling the "high mean! doding," and may falls hack on catechism. This is a very easy way of arguing. The writer frames his questions to suit his intended answers, and frames the answers to sait his questions. It is like gaining a varified in court by briting the jindge and packing the jury, and the conclusions in the one-case are no reserve the truth, right or justice than in the other.

One of Esop's fables rums something like this: A forester and a lion were one day arguing stone in the point of apperiodity between a man and a lion, and the man, for want of a hetter argument, pointing to a marile monstancing, on which was excited that the sculptor had no lion to contend with when he was craving his statue, but had it all his own way. "But now," says the lion to the state, "lied us be the carriers and we will make a lion stricting over the man."

Let Mr. Free Trader and Protection "earol" a little. The former asks divers and sundry questions, which the latter will unawer according to the facts, and if the reside will compare the replies with those framed for items by the interrogator he will have a fair spaception as to how near the trails "Free Trader" can come:
